WASHINGTON, SEPTEMBER 6, 1880.

FOR PRESIDENT.

JAMES A. GARFIELD, of Ohio.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,

CHESTER A. ARTHUR, of New York.

THE TREASURY UNDER HANCOCK. In considering the possible gains to the country which may come from a change in the administration from republican to demogratic, from HAYES to HANCOCK, from JOHN SHERMAN to the eminent confederate who will claim the treasury portfolio by virtue of the 138 solid votes from the united south, we must not forget the wealth of financial wisdom which the new regime will possess and which will crowd itself inevitably to the front and exercise its proper influence upon the policy of the new administration, if Heaven kindly vouchsafes us one be a condemnation of Shuaman's financial policy. All his theories are pronounced false; all his acts are declared pernicious; all his experiments are regarded as failures. If HANCOCK should be elected a change would be inevitable, because of the want of faith in Sherman's system; because of the promise to relieve the country from the burdens its trial has imposed. We are to have something new in the financial line. some improvement corresponding with the promise held out, and commensurate with the difference-the immense difference between the bungler SHERMAN and the coming secretary of the treasury, who will be a man of perfected financial ideas, as far advanced in his special branch as HANCOCK himself is beyond the range of ordinary statesmanship. This is the expectation; this is the grand climax which we are to reach, This great financier is already born and lies hid somewhere within the extensive bullrushes of the great democratic swamp. HANCOCK, with the magnificent field-glass on the lookout for him, and will find him without doubt. Should he turn to New England the most prominent object that would strike his financial line of vision would be BEN BUTLER, who holds to flat money; but BUTLER has declined in adsituation, and is not fully assured in his and folly: not absolutely first rate even for that. The contemplate, a remembrance of which makes middle states contain Dayard, but he the south solid and binds us together to opmiddle states contain Bayard, but he would be merely a continuation of John Shermans; wedded to the same follies, given row to the same delusions. The financier of the future must come, therefore from the of the future must come, therefore, from the south. This will be necessary in order to satisfy the holders of the largest class of the canquerors. To admit it is to confine the confine the south of the largest class of the canquerors. To admit it is to confine the confi claims, the possessors of the largest number of electoral votes, and because the other sections, unhappily, do not have a man who can fill the bill. The south has such a man, and his name is Davis. He is the genius that has been inflicted upon us—reconstrucof finance made perfect by experience. No man ever had a harder problem than Davis in the management of confederate finances, and when we return to confederate rule there is no reason why we should not avail ourselves of the highest confederate wisdom. To this there can be no objection.

The theory of BEN BUILER that all you it for a time took such strong hold of his powerful intellect that he tried it on the desperate fortunes of the confederacy. He found a weak spot in it-one he could not get over, and only one. But for the one weak place BEN's theory would be perfect. The weakness is that fiat money will get excessive in amount. In spite of laws, constitutions, orders of the president, treasury circulars and scarcity of paper, more money of the fiat kind got affoat than the demands of business required, and it depreciated, smashed business, brought distress on the people and imperiled the great cause. In this alarming condition of things the genins of Davis came to the rescue, and in his message to the confederate congress, second session of 1863, he promulgated the efficient and adequate remedy. We are struck with admiration at the resources of the mighty mind which saw what no other man ever before had imagined. Borran is great, but he never saw what DAVIS did. SAM CARY is great, but be missed it. Ewino untirely atumbled over it; and yet it is simple-just | as a imple as the making an egg stand on end when Columbus comes to the demonstration. Let us have a statesman equal to the occasion. The message of Davis can be found in " Appleton's Annual 'Cyclopedia," 1873, page 795.

A THREAT OF VIOLENCE. Who knows himself a braggart Let him fear this; for it will come to pass That every braggart shall be found an ass.

When on Saturday we referred to the Meridian (Miss.) Mercury, a very bitter and sucompromising, bulldozing democratic theet, which is printed and published by A. G. Honn & Son, editors and proprietors, the son being a clerk in the posteffice de partment for the last fifteen months, we supposed that the aforesald sen had had the good sense and good taste to take his carpet-bag and return to Mississippi and devote his best abilities and energies to the labor of abusing the republican cause and those who espouse it. But it appears that we were mistaken. This emocratic sap-sucker is still here enjoying his elerkabip, drawing his salary, and devoting the strength that patronage infuses into his inconsistent and mercenary body to the work of abusing the republican party. Unless our information is at fault this Mississippi editor and proprietor, when he perused our Saturday's article, became greatly enraged, and to use a vulgarism, he The election of HANCOCK would, of course office of THE NATIONAL REPUBLICAN and know. We neglected to tell him, cowhide its editor. We are inclined to eredit this information for the reason that it comes to us through another clerk in the vonches for its authenticity.

Now, we would not notice this matter but for the fact that this vallant young resentative. man is of the editorial profession, and of course means business. We have been in editorial life for some fortylive years, and have never enjoyed the titilation of the cawhide, nor have we yet suffered in any way from a threat of per sonal violence, and now as one of our own profession proposes to give us a taste of this journalistic luxury, it is our purpose, under the circumstances, that this threat shall either be retracted and apologized for as that adorns all of his gorgeous pleaures, is publicly as it was made or be carried into execution. It matters but little to us which shape it may take, but this threat caunot remain in its present shape without reaching a culminating point in some direction.

In this aspect Mr. Honn, the belligerent clerk in the postoffice departmest, is out of place in a republican administration as a harer of its patronage. In the second place, this is not a very auspicious point formaking the mule, has no pride of ancestry or hope of threats of personal violence, and a very posterity, poor place to make them unless the attempt s made to carry them into execution.
